Improvisation (IMPROV) Comedian

“Captains to the playing field” yells the referee.
The improv show begins exuberantly.

The captain of the blue team challenges the red team to the game of “blind line.”
The captain of the red team says that's fine.

The audience decides what they want the scene to be about.
One suggestion the referee hears is brussel sprout.

The teams bring the suggestions to life on the stage.
Making dialogue up as if it was written on a page.

Now the audience decides which scene they like most.
Is it the one about the brussel sprout or the one about the ghost?

I'm in the Middle School League at Comedy Sportz.
I perform improv games with my teams support.

When I'm an adult, I will become a major league player.
In the game of “fairytale countdown,” I'll be the unfortunate dragon slayer.

   Being creative and thinking on my feet,
   Coming up with puns, lines and rhymes so I won't see defeat.

   Then, I'm going to Chicago to work at The Second City.
   Developing my characters and making sure they are witty.

I will follow in the footsteps of the greats at Saturday Night Live.
In hopes of becoming rich and famous is why I really strive.

   Finally, when all is said and done,
   I will teach others improv, so they can have fun.
